Finance Graduates @ Fujitsu

With the support of your manager and mentor you will gain expertise in the practical application of your accounting knowledge in a large high growth technology company. You will also gain experience in management and tax accounting and have an overview of all aspects of the Finance Department. You will build relationships and work closely with all levels of management which will allow you to develop the communication skills required for a successful career.

What does the Fujitsu Finance Graduate Program entail?

The Finance Graduate Program at Fujitsu is a 12 month structured development program within the Finance professional community. You will gain exposure to our major business units.

During the program, your finance skills, interpersonal skills and general business acumen will be progressed and regular feedback provided to you. At the completion of the program you should have the skills required to move into a Financial Analyst role.

What does the Fujitsu Graduate Program offer you?

Our Graduate Program has CEO and Executive sponsorship, providing you with exposure to, and the opportunity to work with, senior management of the company.

In addition, you will have a "buddy" to help you find your feet, and from whom you can seek advice.

A competitive remuneration package offered to graduates will be reviewed regularly based on individual performance and market data.
